Assistive technology: effects of training on education assistants' perceptions of themselves as users and facilitators of assistive technology and consequent transfer of skills to the classroom environment

Dianne J. Chambers
University of Notre Dame Australia
CHAPTER 7

REFERENCES

The Reading Teacher, 60(7), 686-689.

Reflective Practice, 7(2), 197-214.

http://writing.colostate.edu/guides/research/experiment/pop3e.cfm.

Journal of Mixed Methods Research, 3(2), 95-108.

Phillips, D.C. (1986). Philosophical issues in educational research: Is there room for truth in the soft sciences? Bentley, Western Australia: Western Australian Institute of Technology.

Russotti, J., & Shaw, R. (2004). In-service training for teaching assistants and others who work with students with visual impairments. Journal of Visual Impairment & Blindness, 95(8), 483-487.

