Sitting on the rail: The Westralian Worker's response to wartime issues

Robert P. Corr
University of Notre Dame Australia

Follow this and additional works at: http://researchonline.nd.edu.au/theses

Part of the Australian Studies Commons, and the History Commons

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA
Copyright Regulations 1969

WARNING
The material in this communication may be subject to copyright under the Act. Any further copying or communication of this material by you may be the subject of copyright protection under the Act.
Do not remove this notice.

Publication Details

This dissertation/thesis is brought to you by ResearchOnline@ND. It has been accepted for inclusion in Theses by an authorized administrator of ResearchOnline@ND. For more information, please contact researchonline@nd.edu.au.
Sitting on the Rail

The Westralian Worker’s response to wartime issues

Robert Corr

November 2003

A thesis submitted in accordance with the requirements of the degree of Bachelor of Arts (Honours) in History at the University of Notre Dame Australia.
Acknowledgements

This thesis could not have been completed without the assistance of my supervisor, Associate Professor Simon Adams; the Australian Labor Party; the J.S. Battye Library of Western Australian History; and the wonderful Manas. Thank you all.
Abstract

The Westralian Worker occupies a privileged place in Western Australia's labour history, as the working class movement's official organ. This study seeks to understand how the paper dealt with its conflicting roles as reflector and projector of labour movement opinion—the observer-agent dichotomy. It does so by analysing the Worker’s response to some of the major issues facing labour during World War I. The peace movement, anti-German attitudes, the persecution of the IWW, and the conscription debates are considered. It will be argued that the Worker attempted to accommodate a wide range of views, but as organised labour's divisions grew deeper, this position became untenable; ultimately the Westralian Worker was captured by the anti-conscriptionists.
Table of contents

Abstract

List of illustrations

Chapter one

Introduction 1

Context and background 5

Chapter two

Sitting on the rail? 18

Peace and pro-Germanism 29

Chapter three

Our old pals the square’eads 38

On the goldfields 44

Chapter four

In the forests 55

On the waterfront 60

Chapter five

A gang of anarchists 69

Context and Background 76

Conclusion

Bibliography
List of illustrations

Figure 1  “WAR!!! The ‘Worker’ Apprentice Reads the News.” Cartoon taken from the Westralian Worker, 7 August 1914, p12.

Figure 2  “Stop it, you bully! Why don’t you take on someone your own size!” Cartoon taken from the Westralian Worker, 7 August 1914, p12.

Figure 3  “Our Young Soldiers.” Photograph taken from the Westralian Worker, 14 August 1914, p1.