David Barry

Fr David Barry made profession as a monk of New Norcia in 1957 and was priested there in 1963. He then did further studies in theology at S. Anselmo in Rome, gaining the S.T.L. He later gained his BA (Hons) in Classics from UWA (1975) and the Dip.Ed. from Murdoch Uni (1979). He spent 1997 teaching English in China, and 2002 doing archival research in Europe for his monastery's archives. Since 2010 he has been part of a small team working on Bishop Rosendo Salvado's Diaries, first transcribing from digital scans of the originals, then translating them (they are mainly in Spanish) and finally preparing very detailed indexes for the many hundreds of people and the many place names mentioned. He hopes to complete a thorough review of the translation and the people index in 2022. It will be someone else's task to finalise copy editing and proof reading of the more than one million words of text and notes, and the several hundred pages of indexes containing thousands of diary page references. David still leads the occasional weekend retreat at the monastery and offers spiritual direction and conferences there. He spends some time most days working in the orchard of the monastery.
